Portland, OR, USA KGW Newschannel 8 story on the connection between oyster larvae dieoffs and ocean acidification, aired November 30, 2009.

Oysters in deep trouble: Is Pacific Ocean's chemistry killing sea life?

Oyster larvae have been dying by the billions. Scientists suspect it's a sign that carbon dioxide is dramatically affecting the ocean - and if they're right, it could push Washington into the center of the debate about the future of the seas.
