

Beaufort Gyre Exploration Project: Dispatch 27: Last Mooring

Rick Krishfield
October 11, 2010

At Mooring site D early in the morning, preparations begin to deploy the last of the BGOS moorings and finish this portion of the cruise. Early on, sitting off Tuk waiting for fuel, it seemed unlikely that we would reach this point with only a few CTD stations remaining after this, but with some luck and extra hard work in difficult conditions, it looks like we could pull it off.

Having described the mooring operations several times already (and running out of words), I'll let the pictures speak for themselves. Suffice it to say that the redeployment went well, and the system is positioned with the other two moorings for another year of data acquisition under the ice pack.

Last updated: October 22, 2014

Related Multimedia

October 11 slideshow

» View Slideshow

Copyright ©2007 Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, All Rights Reserved.

Mail: Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, 266 Woods Hole Road, Woods Hole, MA 02543, USA.

E-Contact: info@whoi.edu; press relations: media@whoi.edu, tel. (508) 457-2000

Problems or questions about the site, please contact webdev@whoi.edu