

Beaufort Gyre Exploration Project: Dispatch 10: The Calm Before The Figurative Storm

Alex Kain
September 26, 2009

After the ship slurped up its last desired drop of diesel, the Louis continued north en route to the 150 west line, along which scientists and crew

It's nice to be on the open sea for a few days before the ship returns to constant crunching. In addition to providing a peaceful daytime ride, the c

The downtime during the fueling allowed everyone aboard the ship a chance to cut back and relax. Before the refueling began, crewmembers ar Arctic Circle. The party was a relaxed, light hearted affair where people focused on their poker game more than their data analysis. Party attend

Coast Guard Cadet Andrew Pearson plays guitar and sings while Captain Andrew McNeill accompanies on the bass guitar.

Although the container on the left appears to be brimmin
it's actually a metal bucket filled with chicken wings. By tl was not a chicken wing in sight.

Yesterday WHOI's Rick Krishfield treated a group to the first in a series of talks given by scientists on board. Rick summarized the progress and Beaufort Sea.

Rick Krishfield explains WHOI's involvement in the Arctic Obser collaboration of scientific groups that seeks to place a drifting ar (IBOs) throughout the Arctic.

The past two low-key days are uncharacteristic of what lies ahead. Throughout the next three weeks, over thirty moorings and buoys will be dep

All text and photos property of Alex Kain.

Last updated: October 19, 2015

Copyright ©2007 Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, All Rights Reserved.

Mail: Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, 266 Woods Hole Road, Woods Hole, MA 02543, USA.

E-Contact: info@whoi.edu; press relations: media@whoi.edu, tel. (508) 457-2000

Problems or questions about the site, please contact webdev@whoi.edu