

Beaufort Gyre Exploration Project: Dispatch 38: Nearly Ice Free

Rick Krishfield
September 11, 2006

We are between mooring stations today, having finished with all of the BGOS moorings yesterday, and heading to the CABOS mooring tomorrow. In the meantime, a few other stations will be occupied, but not too many since we are running out of time on this cruise. We are rapidly steaming through diminishing ice conditions that eventually turn into mostly open water. All of a sudden, the end of the cruise seems very near.

Hence, there is some time for some reflection on prior days of the cruise, and looking ahead past the end of the cruise. Amongst the busy scientific schedule, there was usually time for some social activities. Beside the "Meet and Greet" night described in Dispatch 8, we also had a costume party one night, and a culture festive with international foods contributed by the scientists another night. Often these events were entertained with sing-alongs to the music of "The Chief and I".

Then there was the Cribbage tournament, where Scott Payment won the championship. On other nights, the movies seemed to be the big attraction. It seemed that the people that complained the most about how bad they were were the ones who watched every night.

Still, there is no place like home, and everyone agrees that email or phone calls with loved ones is the best entertainment going. So we look forward to end of the cruise, albeit somewhat wistfully since that means that we will also be parting with good friendships that we made over the past 6 weeks.

Last updated: October 19, 2015

Seaman Bill Dobbin was the priest during the costume party. Photo by Mike Dempsey.

The Mummy is Shige Nishino and the Sumo wrestler is Michiyo Kawai. Photo by Kristina Brown.

The whole gang from Oz, and then some. Photo by Kristina Brown.

Yutian Jiao, Jiuxin Shi, Mary Steel, and Jane Eert make Chinese dumplings for the culture festival. Photo by Yutian Jiao.

Copyright ©2007 Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, All Rights Reserved.
Mail: Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, 266 Woods Hole Road, Woods Hole, MA 02543, USA.
E-Contact: info@whoi.edu; press relations: media@whoi.edu, tel. (508) 457-2000
Problems or questions about the site, please contact webdev@whoi.edu