

Beaufort Gyre Exploration Project: Dispatch 3: Underway

Steve Lambert, WHOI
August 4, 2012

The weather is not so good today with the wind exceeding 40 knots, the temperature has fallen more than ten degrees, and it has begun to rain. No more shorts and tee shirts for the group!

With the ship's crew making preparations for the voyage ahead, the scientists continue to make use of the time to locate and organize equipment. The forward hold, foredeck, and helicopter hangar are all full of scientific instruments and equipment. It has all been packed for transport but must now be unpacked and unboxed for use during the next month.

Last updated: September 30, 2014

Copyright ©2007 Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, All Rights Reserved.
Mail: Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, 266 Woods Hole Road, Woods Hole, MA 02543, USA.
E-Contact: info@whoi.edu; press relations: media@whoi.edu, tel. (508) 457-2000
Problems or questions about the site, please contact webdev@whoi.edu

Related Multimedia

August 4 photos

» View Slideshow