Ask a Counselor

May 2006

Dear WFB: I'm divorced and this summer I'm going to have my twin six-year olds with me for the month of July. Since I work full-time, I need child care for them and would love to find a day camp where they'll have a great time. The camp also has to be convenient and affordable for me. I hope you can help – I'm sure you can understand how much I want their stay with me to be enjoyable. How do I begin?

Dear Parent Planning for July: How wise you are to start now to plan a happy experience for your kids this summer! We're experts at finding all types of summer programs—so we're happy to help.

Call WFB (1-800-328-4071) as soon as possible – summer camps usually fill up early. You'll speak directly to a WFB counselor who will ask about your children's interests, your location, budget, hours of care you need, and other important details. Then the WFB counselor will research camp programs in your area that fit your needs as closely as possible. We'll call you within a few days, and send you WFB Profiles of the camps we find, including hours, price, location, activities, meals, counselor qualifications, and other relevant details. With all the legwork done and information in hand, you can then choose the camp program that works best for your needs.

Call today – and let us get to work on helping to plan a wonderful summer for you and your kids!
